
THANKS

In chronological order:

My father, for introducing me to philosophy at the age of thirteen.

Matthew Halfant, friend of my youth and mathematician, for always arguing with me, and warning me about my dangerously irrational and artistic tendencies of mind.

Susan Schmid, once a friend and no longer in my life, whose fertile and creative intellect helped the initial refinement of the first chapter.

Anne Holt, young mentor, brilliant mind, glorious being, whose keen insight, fine analytical and editing skills, supportive criticism and enthusiastic support combined for an all too brief a time to support me as I began to write the first draft of the book. She led me as much towards an understanding of myself as to an understanding of what I was trying to say in the book.

Peggy Rosen, friend and artist, who stood by me as I finished the first draft and began the second. A perceptive interpreter, she understood my ideas sometimes better than I did myself. She helped me chisel away at my first draft until the dross was gone and a clear line of argument emerged.

Mikaela Bennett, former piano student, young writer, who applied her analytical skills in coaxing me out of my ivory tower and engaging me in dialogue with my potential readers.

Mark Edwards, who has discussed with me the ideas of the book.

Copyright © 2000-2005 by Joseph Bloom.

Registered ® (with Copyright Office effective) August 22, 2005.

Registration number TXu1-258-641